Our Nebraska Correspondence. FONTENBLLE, DODGE COUNTY, N. T. March 21, 1858. Increase of the Army by Volunteer Service. The Utah Expedition-Starting of Trains Across the Plains-Emigration to Nebraska this Spring

General News, &c., &c.

Probably by the time this reaches the Herald definite action will have been had by Congress upon the Army bill now before that body. For the Utah coretary.
The Board will remain in session for some weeks.

service it is now rather late to organize a volunteer force, equip and prepare them for a march in time for the early spring emigration, for already trains of Mormons are preparing for a start to join their brethren in Utah. The grass is now starting upon our prairies and along the Platte Valley bottoms. It had been generally supposed that the War De partment would have taken some steps toward stopping "aid and comfort" (in the shape of men and arms) from crossing the plains here to Utah. Hundreds of Mormons are even now getting ready for their toilsome journey, and they go, not only un der orders from Brigham Young, but with all of those strong Mormon prejudices and feelings which nas already placed Utah in a state of rebellion

They go there to assist with brain and sinew the already mustered thousands of a Mormon force. And yet how easily could this migrating force to these rebellious subjects (and they may yet) have been stopped upon our Western borders. It appears to me if the War Department, or the powers that be, would simply count the cost of transporting troops and munitions of war to Utah, that steps would have been taken to, in some manner, stop the overland Mormon emigration. Indeed, I am safe in the prediction that by the middle of the coming summer from one to two thousand able bodied men will be added to the Mormon force in Utah. It may be imagined that the United States force already near Salt Lake City will stop these Mormons from entering the valley. This idea is absurd, for each train of emigrants crossing the plains are under the guidance of men well experienced in the route to be travelled, and will assuredly dodge the army in entering Salt Lake. As soon as the grass starts sufficient to sustain stock, the emigrant road will be dotted with trains ar route for California, Utah and Oregon, and in some three or four weeks more they will be on the move.

This spring's emigration to Nebraska will, it is generally acceded, be quite large, and the earliest emigrants will of course have the first choice of the vacant lands. From New York, Connecticut, New Jersey, Ohio, Illinois and other States, they will in a short time come pouring into Nebraska. To such as purpose emigrating with their families hither, and becoming or continuing farmers after their arrival here, and indeed it is as good a manner as you can travel across the States, and in this manner such few things as are actually needed to start in your Western home can, without additional expense, be brought along, such as a bed, blankets, some clothing, &c., &c. Upon your arrival at the Missouri river and the Nebraska towns along that stream the best advice I can give you is (unless yon have relatives or friends upon whom you depend for advice, &c.) to push on inland

The Turkiah Officers and the Indians.

(From the Washington Union, March 30.)

Yesterday morning Vice Admirai Mahemmed Pacha and suite, of the Furkish navy, visited the Washington Arsenai, by invitation of the Secretary of War, who accompanied them. The party were received by Major Bell, commandant of the arsenal, and a salute was fired from the field battery. The Secretary then escorted his distinguished gueste around the arsenal, visiting the different workshops and depositories of arms, and explaining (through an interpreter) whatever was novel and curious. The Turkish officers examined everything with apparent interest, and seemed especially pleased with the friction primers used for the discharge of cannon.

By the time the Secretary and his party had "gone the grand rounds" of the arsenal, he had in his suite General Lawon, Colonels Cooper, Totten, Craig and Larned, Colonel Johnson, of the List Dragoons, and a large number of other officers, in full or undress uniform. With the Pacha's suite were Mr. J. Horaford Smith, Ottoman Consul at New York, and Mr. Oscanyan, the interpreter. The Tarkish officers were their magnificent uniforms, the collars, cuifs and seams of which are covered with heavy gold embroidery and various "decorations" of honor. Their sword belts and straps were of gold wabbing, and they wore on their heads the scarlet felt fer or scull cap, with a small gold circular plate on the top, and a pendant silken tassel. One of them, Major Hassam Boy, speaks English with fluency, having served for some years in the British havy.

Having visited the principal objects of interest, the Secretary escorted his guests to the Eastern quay, where the patentees of the various firearms now being tested or reported on had been invited to display their weapons. The Sharpe, the Colt, the Morse and the Burnaide rifes had been brought there, and they were duly tested with more oless success. Among those wh

Mix, Acting Commissioner of Indian Adairs, directed their movements.

The Secretary and his guests, with an array of ladder, took a position in front of the commandant's quarters, in a grove on the bank of the Potomac, where a circle was formed by the ordnance soldiers. Into this came the Indians, singing a war song, and they seated themselves on the ground in a circle, presenting a most picturesque appearance. Three of their number then commenced beating monoseneously on drums, and singing an equally monotonous chaunt, varied by occasional tries from the others. At last one old fellow jumped up and began dancing or rather jumping, and soon the entire party (except the drummers) were joining in the war dance, brandtshing their pipes and tomahawks and giving the war whoop.

dancing or rather jumping, and soon the entire party (except the drummers) were joining in the war dance, brandishing their pipes and tomahawks and giving the war whoop.

After the dancing, and at the request of a lady whose wishes are laws to all who know her, "Little Crow" made a speech; which Gen. Cullen translated. He described the successful pursuit of the band under the Ink padutah, which last year killed forty-eight whites and took four isdies prisoners. At first the Sloux refused to go in pursuit, but after the arrival of Major Sherman and his battery a party of 125 started, led by himself and interpreter Campbell (who was present). They killed eleven, and two ladies were rescued. Among the Indians present were two who had brought in one of the Iadies—Miss Gardner. "Little Crow" delivered this narrative harangue with expressive gesticulation, and there was much regret that his own language was not understood.

The two Indians who had rescued Miss Gardner were requested by the ladies to stand forward, and were applicated for their heroism. General Cullen then graphically described a scene prior to the departure of "Little Crow's" war party, when some twenty-five hundred warriors, armed and painted for war, surrounded the camp. One soldier was stabbed by them, and General Cullen when the officers present, to the coolness and the prudence of Major Shorman, which prevented a massacro which must have resided in a general indian war.

Major Bell afterwards invited those present to partake of a coliation at his quarters, where the indians were also gutertained. The Turkish officers expressed themselves flightly piecaed with what they had witnessed.

It is reported that since his arrival in this country, on a certain occasion, a lady was admiring an elegant cashing the gutery had been also discounted that since his arrival in this country, on a certain occasion, a lady was admiring an elegant cashing his policies or perinase, momentariy to grantly her vanity. Chamber of Commerce. A meeting of the Chamber of Commerce was held on Thursday evening at Clinton Hall, Astor place, Mr. Peletiab Perit in the chair.

The minutes of the former meeting having been rea and approved, the following gentlemen were put forward for membership and unanimously elected:—L. E. Lyman, Drury W. Bowman, W. T. Colman, Ambrose Snow, Chas. F. Dambman and Herman Marcuse.

Mr. Charles A. Davis was elected a member of the Committee on Arbitration, and Hon. Charles King, L. L. D., The Committee on Location reported that they had selected the suit of rooms on the corner of Cedar and selected the suit of rooms on the corner of Cedar and William streets as the most suitable for the purposes of the Chamber, and J. Smith Homans, editor of the Bankers' Magazine, was recommended as a suitable person to fill the office of Corresponding Socretary, who, after some discussion, was elected thereto.

The by-laws in relation to fees were altered, so as to increase them from $3 to $10 yearly.

The Chairman announced that there was $1,600 on hand in the treasury, with the outstanding annual dues.

The Chairman presented a letter from the Hon John Cochrane, and also one from the Socretary of the Treasury, in reply to a memorial from the Chamber, complaining of grievances existing in the routine of customs business at New York. These gentlemen expressed the willingness of the department at Washington to allow the merchants at New York every facility in their power necessary to a prompt transaction of their business, consistent with an efficient execution of the revenue, but without committing itself to any change in the regulations now in force, or that may be proposed or recommended, the department had decided to comply in part with the third resolution accompanying the report, and designate John E. Guthrie special agent of the department; A. Schell, Collector; A. Birdaali, Naval Officer; E. B. Hart, Surveyor, and J. Phillips, Appraiser, to co operate with three importers to be named by the Chamber.

Mr. G. W. Butxi suggested that the Committee on Importers ought to represent the dry goods, hardware and sugar interests, and it was agreed that the President should appoint a committee thereon.

Capt. Marchall called the attention of the Chamber to a measure at present before the Legislature conferring upon the lessees of piers the power to let them out to whomsoever they chose. He spoke at length of the monopoly it would be giving owners of wharves, and pronounced its a matter of the greatest importance, as foreign commerce might be injuriously affected by its provisions, the owners of wharves being compowe William streets as the most suitable for the purposes of

It was, however, carried, and observe to Albany.

Capt. Marghan, then drew attention to a bill before Congress to institute an American code of signals. The compulsory clause in the bill had been removed, and the would, therefore, ask its endorsement by the Chamber. This was opposed, upon which Capt. Marshall withdrew the motion, and it was agreed that a committee of farce be appointed to consider the applict.

The Chamber then appearant.
